

How NAIS will effect the non-farmer

If anyone's freedom is destroyed, everyone's freedom is in jeopardy.
Even yours.

NAIS imposes a lot of new, additional expenses on farmers. This will drive up the cost of meat, milk, ice cream, leather and other animal products.

The extra burden on farmers will eliminate smaller operations, reducing your choices at the supermarket as control of our national food supply is concentrated into the hands of fewer and fewer large corporate factory farms.

Lack of competition reduces incentive for excellence. ("You don't like it? So what? You want to buy from someone else? There IS no someone else!") Monopolies are bad for business and bad for consumers. That is why they are illegal.

Translation: Poorer quality: higher price.

If all this technology can be tracked by USDA today, it can be tracked by someone else tomorrow. The USDA has already agreed to share this information database with other countries. We are setting ourselves up for MASSIVE INSTANT attack through veins we are opening in our national infrastructure.

If you or your children want to have a pet bunny, duckling, or canary, you get to join the overburdened ranks of the farmers and livestock owners, and make record keeping and fee paying a big part of your life. Even a single egg hen means you'll have to buy a Premise ID every year, tag and track your chicken and file reports with the government.

You get to live with the destruction of our Constitution and Bill of Rights, as NAIS is in violation of no less than six Constitutional Amendments and Rights.
